Hardship Fund
Sought by CIA

Adm. William F. Raborn, CIA director, has asked Congress to authorize payment of travel expenses for one vacation trip every two years for CIA agents and their families who are stationed in hardship areas.

Raborn's proposal would authorize travel expenses for "rest and recuperation at a location having different environmental conditions." It would apply to agents who haven't had any home leave.

The proposal was sent to the House Armed Services Committee yesterday for study.
